Congressman Adam Schiff
2269 Rayburn House
Office Building
Washington, DC 20515

Dear Representative Schiff,

I am writing to thank you for submitting Congressional testimony in support of a continued humanitarian assistance by the United States to the post-war rehabilitation of the Republic of Artsakh.

Throughout the past decades, the assistance helped address various urgent humanitarian needs, and consequences of the devastating aggression by Azerbaijan. In particular, American support of the HALO Trust's effective and efficient activities in war-affected areas allowed the international humanitarian mine-clearance organization to neutralize tens of thousands of landmines and other deadly remnants of the aggression.

People of Artsakh are grateful for the crucial support. We hope that ongoing and enhanced humanitarian assistance from the United States to the Republic of Artsakh will help our countries to continue enforcing regional stability and security, as well as to provide basic humanitarian needs to our citizens.

I also want to use this opportunity and congratulate you, your colleagues in the US Congress, and all American compatriots with the Independence Day. Throughout its independent history, the United States has been at the forefront of defending the values of freedom and democracy, which inspired many nations across the globe, including the Republic of Artsakh, to rise and struggle for their inalienable rights and liberties.

Please accept our best wishes to you, your dear ones, and the entire American nation. We look forward to our continued cooperation towards a peaceful and prosperous South Caucasus.

Respectfully,

Dear Representative Sherman,

I am writing to thank you for submitting Congressional testimony in support of a continued humanitarian assistance by the United States to the post-war rehabilitation of the Republic of Artsakh.

Throughout the past decades, the assistance helped address various urgent humanitarian needs, and consequences of the devastating aggression by Azerbaijan. In particular, American support of the HALO Trust's effective and efficient activities in war-affected areas allowed the international humanitarian mine-clearance organization to neutralize tens of thousands of landmines and other deadly remnants of the aggression.

The issue of humanitarian assistance by the United States to the Republic of Artsakh has always been in the focus of our attention. We have always discussed the program, most recently, during our meeting in Washington, DC, in October, 2019, and I appreciate your consistent attention to this important matter.

People of Artsakh are grateful for your crucial support. We do hope that ongoing and enhanced humanitarian assistance from the United States to the Republic of Artsakh will help our countries to continue enforcing regional stability and security, as well as to provide basic humanitarian needs to our citizens.

I also want to use this opportunity and congratulate you, your colleagues in the US Congress, and all American compatriots with the Independence Day.
